Process Document

Colin Ho

OpenROV Cockpit Interface

Berkeley Marina
Berkeley Marina

The Marina is a forest of sailboats, a gateway to the great ocean beyond. But at dusk, the activity slows down as the wind picks up. At the harbor entrance a red light pulses, beckoning the weary and cold sailors to head home. A lone 20-foot catalina scurries through the breakwaters evading the fall of dusk and rise of the gusts. The crash of each wave and the piles of driftwood drive home the fact that we are mere riders upon the deep, skimmers above the mysteries and forces that swell and lie below.
Users

Berkeley Marina

Users of the Marina are engaging in watersports, and water based recreational activities. From sailing, windsurfing, paddle boarding, kayaking, people are out and about on the water. Many are simply enjoying the calm of the inner harbor, while other are pushing and pulling and fighting to stay atop the forces of the wind and the water.

A kid on the pier leans over the railing and tries to see past the depths and see what secrets it may hold. Fishermen try to lure out the tasty treasures of the deep. But the murky surface of the water is the border from the known to the unknown.
Sight

Boats
Masts
Barnacle
Cloudy

Waves
Algae
Blue
Craggy
Smell

- Salty
- Wet
- Diesel
- Fishy
- Marshy
- Algae
- Cement
- Trash
Sound

Gulls
Chiming
Rocking
Wind

Splash
Paddle
Ploosh
Waves
Senses
Taste
Salty
Chapped
Algae
Moist
Senses

Touch

Wet

Gritty

Smooth

Worn

Rocky

Wet-rope
Adventuring
Belittling
Calming
Color Palette

1. Algae
   - R: 20
   - G: 130
   - B: 90

2. Deep Blue
   - R: 0
   - G: 40
   - B: 80

3. Drift Wood
   - R: 190
   - G: 165
   - B: 140

4. Don’t run into me Red
   - R: 230
   - G: 50
   - B: 50

---

Berkeley Marina

- Algae
  - Water is deep yo.

- Deep Blue
  - Worn by the sea, salt and sun. Bleached light, but warm with age.

- Drift Wood
  - Worn by the sea, salt and sun. Bleached light, but warm with age.

- Don’t run into me Red
  - Bright lights to show where home, and sharp rocks are.
Documentary

OpenROV Cockpit Web Interface

Interface Aesthetics
Spring 2015

Elisabeth Prescott & Kimiko Ryokai
Metaphoric

Everybody at the Marina is just hanging out at just the surface of the water. Everyone knows there is much much more to the water’s depths. You see lifejackets, pensive staring into the depths, fishing lines that sink down into the murkiness.