

Storytelling

We all like stories.

March 12, 2013 – Michael Porath (@poezn)

Farmers Markets in the Five Boroughs

Number of Farmers Markets

Taking a look at the number of farmers markets in the five boroughs of New York City in conjunction with the racial demographics (by percentage) of each region.

Farmers Market Data from 2012: nycopendata.socrata.com

Demographic data from 2010-2012: census.gov

Jen Wang | jenmwang@ischool.berkeley.edu
 Info 247: Information Visualization | Spring 2013

'This American Life' Story Tags*: by Year

*Data from thisamericanlife.org/radio-archives. 8 most common tags of 91 podcast tags represented.

LONDON 2012

206 countries | 302 events | ~10,800 athletes

MEDALS TALLY

Sources: <http://www.london2012.com/medals/medal-count/>
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/2012\_Summer\_Olympics

When Does Service Matter In Restaurants?

By analyzing Yelp reviews, we can determine how much service matters to restaurant businesses. I created a metric called Service Percentage, and used it to compare various characteristics of restaurants.

What is Service Percentage?

The number of reviews with the word "service":

Results for service on Cheese Board Pizza
188

Divided by the total number of reviews:

☆☆☆☆☆ 2607 reviews

Cheese Board Pizza's Service Percentage:

7.21%

Which Characteristics?

Cheese Board Pizza

☆☆☆☆☆ 2607 reviews

Price Range: $
Waiter Service: No
Good For: Lunch
Noise Level: Loud
Ambience: Casual

The Dataset

The 250 most reviewed restaurants in the UC Berkeley area.

There were 100 restaurants excluded from the dataset. These restaurants had less than 20 reviews.

Understanding the Box Plot

Note: In the price chart, only the average is shown for the $$$$ category. This is because there is only one $$$$ restaurant in the Berkeley region.

When Does Service Matter In Restaurants?

Assignment 3 Feedback

Assignment 3 Feedback

- When does decoration enrich the visualization?
When does it distract?

Assignment 3 Feedback

- When does decoration enrich the visualization?
When does it distract?
- Pay attention to layout

Assignment 3 Feedback

- When does decoration enrich the visualization?
When does it distract?
- Pay attention to layout
- What's the take-away? What's the message?
Does the visualization convey that? Is the title accurate?

Assignment 3 Feedback

- When does decoration enrich the visualization?
When does it distract?
- Pay attention to layout
- What's the take-away? What's the message?
Does the visualization convey that? Is the title accurate?
- Start early, have a plan!

Assignment 3 Feedback

- When does decoration enrich the visualization?
When does it distract?
- Pay attention to layout
- What's the take-away? What's the message?
Does the visualization convey that? Is the title accurate?
- Start early, have a plan!

Average: 16.09/20

Why Storytelling?

Contents

The Americas The Economist March 9th 2013

Central America

Out of control

TEGUCIGALPA

In the first of two reports on the threat of rampant violence to Central America's small republics, we look at the risk of Honduras becoming a failed state

WHEN soldiers bundled Honduras's elected president onto an aeroplane to Costa Rica in a coup in 2009, nobody believed that the Central American country would swiftly get back to normal. But even pessimists must be disappointed by what has happened. Although the constitutional crisis was resolved early in 2010 after the election as president of Porfirio Lobo and the return of Manuel Zelaya, his ousted predecessor, Honduras continues to march backwards. Gang violence, catalysed by drug trafficking, and weak law enforcement have given Honduras the highest murder rate in the world. Poor financial management and the hangover from a stop to aid after the coup have left the government struggling to pay its bills. And Congress has picked a fight with the judiciary, creating fresh constitutional strains just as the country gears up for another presidential election in November.

• • •

Contents

The Americas The Economist March 9th 2013

The scale of violence is dizzying. Last year saw 86 murders per 100,000 people according to the National Autonomous University. That was about the same as in 2011, but more than double the Central American average—itsself among the highest in the world (see chart). In 2012 Honduran men in their 20s faced a 1-in-300 chance of being murdered, or 1-in-150 in the most dangerous towns.

Drug mafias, under pressure in Mexico, have set up in Honduras. In January the authorities discovered a cache of weapons, including a gold-plated AK-47 believed to belong to Mexico's "Zetas" mob. Honduras's wild coast and empty jungle provide landing points for some 40% of cocaine destined for the United States. Traffickers pay their hired help in drugs rather than cash, creating a local market and the mayhem that goes with it. Some of the violence comes from gangs known as maras, which migrants form in jails in the United States and remain members of in Central America after they are deported.

Then there are seemingly targeted assassinations. At least 25 journalists, including eight last year, have been killed since the coup. Some members of the opposition have accused the government of snuffing out dissent. But Robert Marin, a reporter on El Heraldo, a newspaper, who has himself received threats, points out that journalists of all political stripes (and none) have been victims. So, too, have gay-rights campaigners—at least eight were killed last year—and lawyers, 15 of whom were murdered. However, these are by no means the people most at risk: some 60 taxi drivers were killed in 2012, in many cases following extortion attempts, and about 70 police. Last month the teenage son of a former police chief was shot dead.

The underlying problem is that few of the killings are investigated, let alone punished. Even as Honduras's murder rate has doubled, the number of police has fallen, from about 14,000 in 2009 to 13,000 now. Many supplement their $400 monthly wages by charging a "war tax" on citizens. A vetting programme begun in August tested 1,231 officers by the end of the year, firing 281 of them. A further 450 left voluntarily. The remainder are due to be vetted this year, and a thousand more recruited annually until the force reaches 20,000. Training time has been doubled, to 12 months.

It will take a decade fully to restore faith in the police, which had "fallen into total discredit", admits Héctor Mejía, the force's spokesman. The army patrols with the police in Tegucigalpa, the capital, and in the northern city of San Pedro Sula, as part of an "emergency" measure renewed three times since it was introduced in 2011.

Many Hondurans are taking protective measures into their own hands. In Villa Cecilia, a small working-class suburb of mechanics, seamstresses and policemen in Tegucigalpa, residents pay 700 lempiras ($15) per household per month to employ four security guards with shotguns. Next will come CCTV, an entry-phone system and a bigger perimeter wall. "If you want to sleep well, you have to pay", shrugs Giovanni Aguilera, a taxi driver whose home is protected by two metal doors, barbed wire, and a pair of large dogs. The city government has encouraged such barrios seguros, permitting residents to block off their streets. The poorest districts, built on steep hillsides lacking formal

Killing fields

Murders per 100,000 people

Year	Honduras	El Salvador	Guatemala	United States	Latin America average
1999	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2001	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2003	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2005	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2007	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2009	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2011	~85	~45	~35	~10	~35
2012	~86	~45	~35	~10	~35

Source: UNODC; national statistics

• • •

Contents

The Americas The Economist March 9th 2013

roads, remain unsealed.

Despite the violence, Honduras's economy grew by a respectable 3.3% last year, and clocked up record legal exports. A free-trade deal with Central America and the United States has helped to attract maquila factories and call-centres, and to protect investments from political turbulence. Remittances keep consumption going, as shown by the glitzy shopping malls mushrooming in the capital.

But the resilient economy hides weak public finances. The government's unpaid bills to its workers and contractors amount to 4% of GDP. Many teachers have stopped turning up at school. A standby agreement with the IMF has not been renewed. As a result, the World Bank has halted its budget support, though it plans to step up other project funding. The government has turned to borrowing in the expensive local market. It is considering an international bond issue. But last month Moody's, a credit-rating agency, changed its outlook on Honduras's already weak credit rating to negative. The government has told several loss-making state-owned companies to come up with reform plans by the end of March. But any savings may be squandered in the run-up to the election.

Honduras's politics has become as dysfunctional as its government and security forces. In December Congress voted to sack four Supreme Court justices who had repeatedly found new laws to be unconstitutional. Their replacements have been more co-operative, approving several controversial laws. One gives the legislature the power to sack senior public officials. "The rule of law in this country has broken down", says Ramón Custodio, head of the official but independent Human Rights Commission. He is among the officials who can now be fired by Congress. He also worries about a media bill that promises new taxes and regulations, which newspapers have described as censorship.

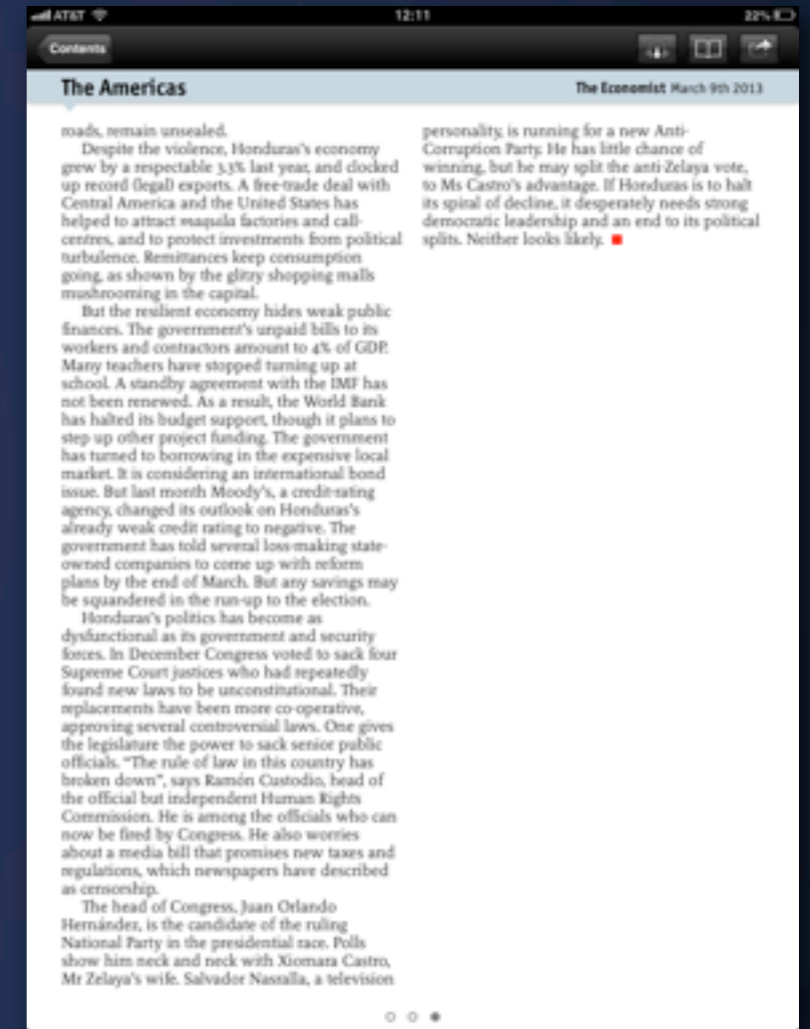

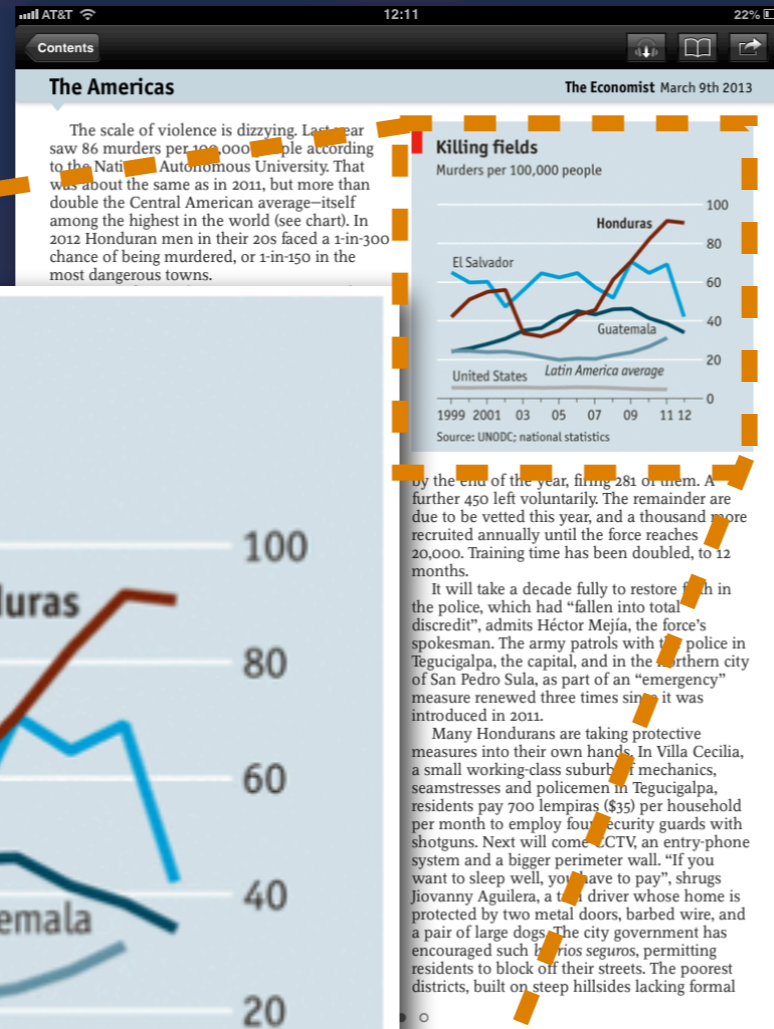

The head of Congress, Juan Orlando Hernández, is the candidate of the ruling National Party in the presidential race. Polls show him neck and neck with Xiomara Castro, Mr Zelaya's wife. Salvador Nasralla, a television personality, is running for a new Anti-Corruption Party. He has little chance of winning, but he may split the anti-Zelaya vote, to Ms Castro's advantage. If Honduras is to halt its spiral of decline, it desperately needs strong democratic leadership and an end to its political splits. Neither looks likely. ■

• • •

Why Storytelling?

an afterthought

This American Life

THIS AMER ICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

This American Life

*What's the structure
of every show?*

THIS AMER ICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

This American Life

*What's the structure
of every show?*

Prologue

THIS AMERICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

This American Life

*What's the structure
of every show?*

Prologue

Act 1

THIS AMERICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

This American Life

*What's the structure
of every show?*

Prologue

Act 1

Act 2

THIS AMERICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

This American Life

*What's the structure
of every show?*

Prologue

Act 1

Act 2

...

Act n

THIS AMERICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

This American Life

*What's the structure
of every show?*

Prologue

Act 1

Act 2

...

Act n

(Conclusion / Credits)

THIS AMERICAN
LIFE
FROM WBEZ

What is Storytelling?

What is storytelling?

The world's oldest profession second

Narrative

Oxford English Dictionary

nar·ra·tive      noun    \ˈner-ə-tiv, ˈna-rə-\

an account of a series of events, facts, etc.,
given in order and
with the establishing of connections
between them.

Narrative

Oxford English Dictionary

nar·ra·tive      noun    \ˈner-ə-tiv, ˈna-rə-\

an account of a series of events, facts, etc.,

given in order and

with the establishing of connections

between them.

Narrative

Oxford English Dictionary

nar·ra·tive      noun    \ˈner-ə-tiv, ˈna-rə-\

an account of a
series of events, facts, etc.,
given in order and
with the establishing of connections
between them.

Narrative

Oxford English Dictionary

nar·ra·tive      noun    \ˈner-ə-tiv, ˈna-rə-\

an account of a series of events, facts, etc.,
given in order and
with the establishing of connections
between them.

Storytelling and Visualization

Learning from other media

You have an audience

Narrative Devices

What narrative devices exist for telling stories with data?

Segel and Heer, 2010

Case Study 1

Periscopic: Guns

<http://guns.periscopic.com>

Case Study 2

NY Times: The Facebook IPO

The Facebook Offering: How It Compares

<http://www.nytimes.com/interactive/2012/05/17/business/dealbook/how-the-facebook-offering-compares.html>

Case Study 3

Reuters: Connected China

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Data Diagnostics
Pattern Discovery
Hypothesis Formation

Storytelling
Clear Communication
Fast Communication

Reader-Driven

Author-Driven

Analysis

Exploratory

Communication

Explanatory

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

No prescribed ordering
No messaging
Free interactivity

Linear ordering of scenes
Heavy messaging
No interactivity

Reader-Driven

Author-Driven

Analysis

Exploratory

Communication

Explanatory

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Interactive Slideshow

Reader-Driven

Author-Driven

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Interactive Slideshow

Drill-Down Story

Reader-Driven

Author-Driven

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Interactive Slideshow

Drill-Down Story

Martini Glass Structure

Reader-Driven

Author-Driven

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Interactive Slideshow

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Interactive Slideshow

Martini Glass Structure

Reader-Driven vs Author-Driven

Segel and Heer, 2010

Interactive Slideshow

Martini Glass Structure

Drill-Down Story

Framework

Framework

Guide. Highlight. Interpret

Visual Structure

support the story

Messaging

tell the story

Interactivity

engage the story

Visual Structure

Where to start?

The infographic header features a background of a blue sky with white clouds and a strip of US dollar bills. On the left, there is a circular logo for 'VISUAL CAPITALIST' containing a piggy bank icon. The main title 'MARKET INTELLIGENCE' is displayed in large white letters, with the date 'MARCH 2013' to its right. Below the title, a photograph of a large yellow mining truck driving on a dirt road in a quarry is shown. A dark green rounded rectangle contains the text 'ABOUT VC MARKET INTELLIGENCE' and a paragraph describing the infographic's purpose.

VISUAL CAPITALIST

MARKET INTELLIGENCE

MARCH 2013

ABOUT VC MARKET INTELLIGENCE

The goal of this monthly infographic is to provide a big picture snapshot of market signals, commodity trends, and economic indicators in an intuitive and visual way.

MARKET TRENDS

MONTH-TO-MONTH

FEBRUARY 2013 VS PREVIOUS MONTH

The major US markets continued their steady rise with the DJIA clos-

COMMODITY	AV. PRICE
AU GOLD (OZ)	$1627.59
AG SILVER (OZ)	$30.33
PT PLATINUM (OZ)	$1674.55
PD PALLADIUM (OZ)	$751.92
OIL OIL (WTI)	$95.31
GAS NAT. GAS (HENRY HUB)	$3.33
U URANIUM (LB)	$42.00
CU COPPER (LB)	$3.66
AL ALUMINUM (LB)	$0.93

For more information on investing and commodities, visit us at:

visualcapitalist.com

Visual Structure

Where to start?

The more linear the better

Journal of experimental biology

The more linear the better

Flea Power; NY Times

The New York Times

February 11, 2011

Flea Power

Scientists using a high-speed camera found that jumping fleas push off the ground with the back sections of their hind legs. But the kneelike trochanter does not press into the ground, as some previous researchers theorized.

THE FLEA'S HIND LEG is divided into five sections. The coxa and femur interlock and store energy before each jump, then quickly pivot apart, pushing the tibia and tarsus into the ground. Spines and hooks on the tarsus provide extra traction. A pad of stretchy protein called resilin is thought to help store energy for the jump.

The flea can jump as high as 38 times its body length.

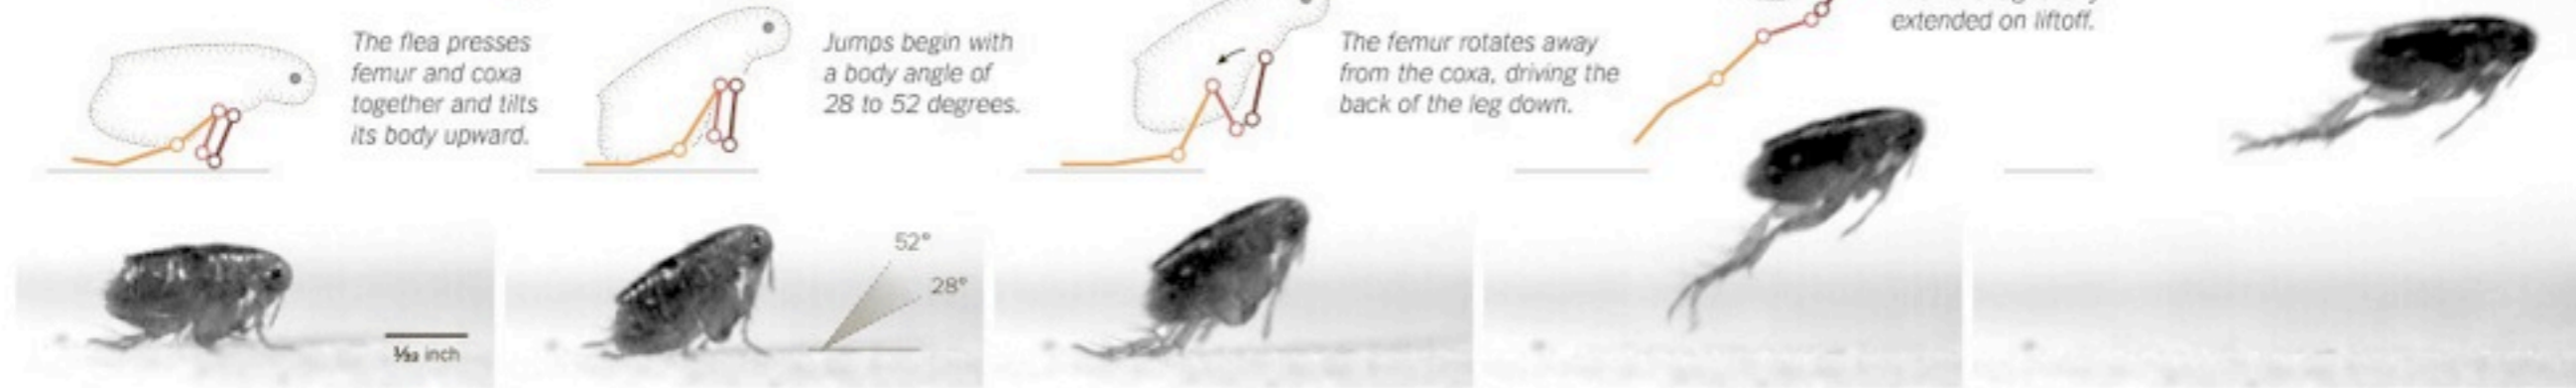

The flea presses femur and coxa together and tilts its body upward.

Jumps begin with a body angle of 28 to 52 degrees.

The femur rotates away from the coxa, driving the back of the leg down.

The hind leg is fully extended on liftoff.

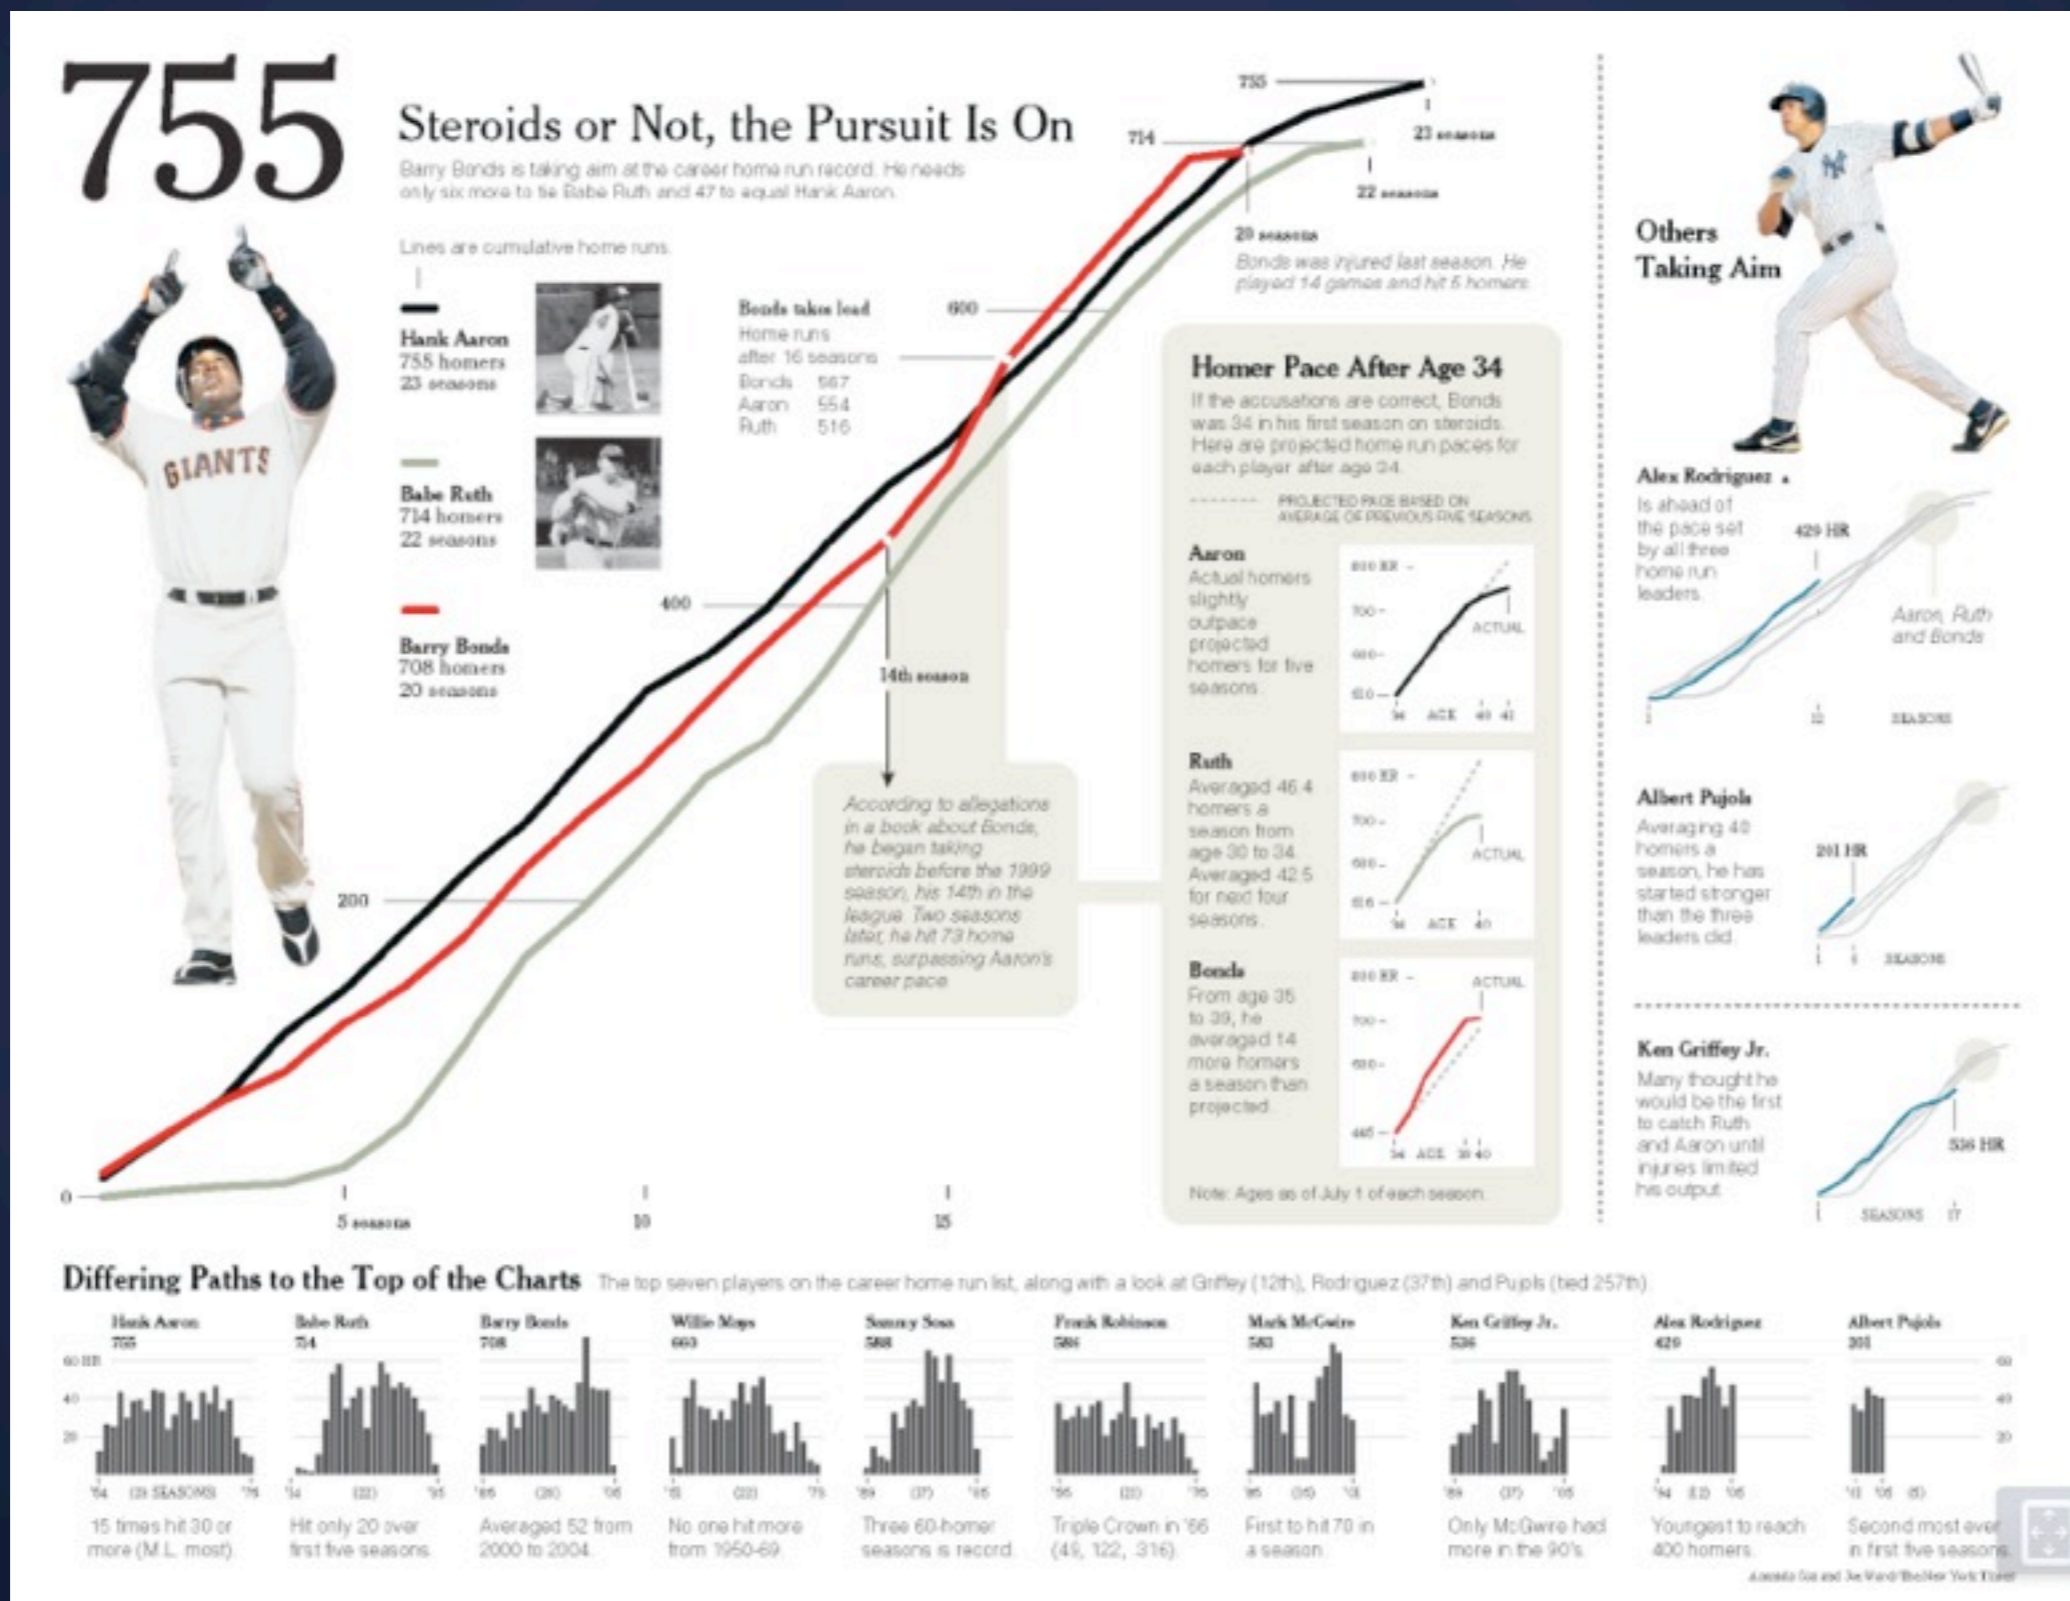

Source: The Journal of Experimental Biology

JONATHAN CORUM/THE NEW YORK TIMES; PHOTOGRAPHS BY GREGORY P. SUTTON AND MALCOLM BURROWS

<http://www.nytimes.com/2011/02/15/science/15flea.html>

Visual Structure

NY Times: Steroids or Not, the Pursuit Is On

Visual Structure

NY Times: Steroids or Not, the Pursuit Is On

Beginning

Others Taking Aim

Differing Paths to the Top of the Charts The top seven players on the career home run list, along with a look at Griffey (12th), Rodriguez (37th) and Pujols (ted 257th).

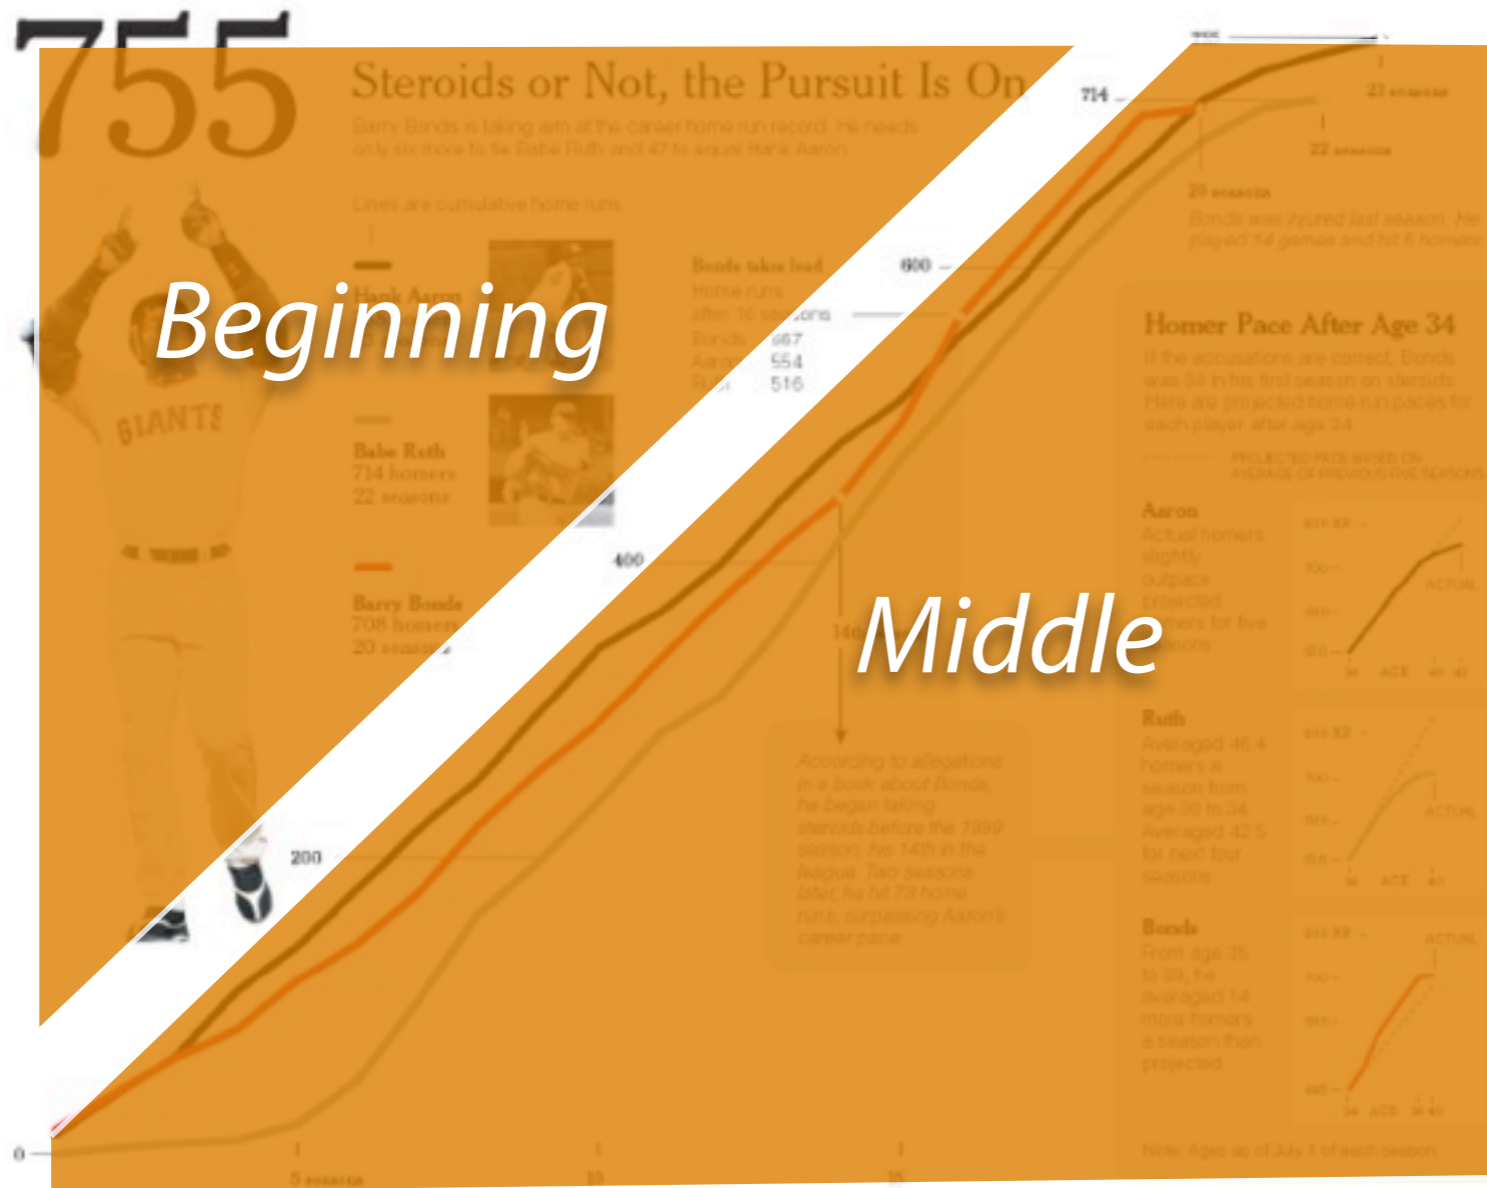

Illustration by David J. Phillip for The New York Times

Visual Structure

NY Times: Steroids or Not, the Pursuit Is On

Others Taking Aim

Alex Rodriguez

is ahead of the pace set by all three home run leaders.

Albert Pujols

Averaging 40 homers a season, he has started stronger than the three leaders did.

Ken Griffey Jr.

Many thought he would be the first to catch Ruth and Aaron until injuries limited his output.

Differing Paths to the Top of the Charts The top seven players on the career home run list, along with a look at Griffey (12th), Rodriguez (37th) and Pujols (ted 257th).

Illustration by David J. Phillip for The New York Times

Visual Structure

NY Times: Steroids or Not, the Pursuit Is On

Visual Structure

NY Times: Steroids or Not, the Pursuit Is On

Visual Structure: Seven Genres

Segel and Heer, 2010

Highlighting and flow

Watson and the Shark, John Singleton Copley (1778)

Highlighting and flow

Watson and the Shark, John Singleton Copley (1778)

Messaging

Tell the story; not JUST with visuals

The Facebook Offering: How It Compares

Messaging

Tell the story; not JUST with visuals

Headline

Messaging

Tell the story; not JUST with visuals

Headline

Caption

Messaging

Tell the story; not JUST with visuals

Headline

Caption

The Facebook Offering: How It Compares

< Prev Next >

1 2 3 4 5

Company value In billions of today's dollars

The Tech I.P.O.'s

Since 1980, there have been about 2,400 technology, Internet and telecom initial public offerings. Until this week, the largest by market capitalization was Google, which was valued at $23 billion, or about $28 billion in today's dollars.

Google went public in 2004

Apple went public in 1980

25 — 20 — 15 — 10 — 5 — 0 —

Year of I.P.O.

1980 1985 1990 2005 2010

Annotation

Messaging

Tell the story; not JUST with visuals

Headline

Caption

Annotation

weave text into the graphic!

Messaging?

Contents 12:11 22%

The Americas The Economist March 9th 2013

Central America

Out of control

TEGUCIGALPA

In the first of two reports on the threat of rampant violence to Central America's small republics, we look at the risk of Honduras becoming a failed state

WHEN soldiers bundled Honduras's elected president onto an aeroplane to Costa Rica in a coup in 2009, nobody believed that the Central American country would swiftly get back to normal. But even pessimists must be disappointed by what has happened. Although the constitutional crisis was resolved early in 2010 after the election as president of Porfirio Lobo and the return of Manuel Zelaya, his ousted predecessor, Honduras continues to march backwards. Gang violence, catalysed by drug trafficking, and weak law enforcement have given Honduras the highest murder rate in the world. Poor financial management and the hangover from a stop to aid after the coup have left the government struggling to pay its bills. And Congress has picked a fight with the judiciary, creating fresh constitutional strains just as the country gears up for another presidential election in November.

• • •

Contents 12:11 22%

The Americas The Economist March 9th 2013

The scale of violence is dizzying. Last year saw 86 murders per 100,000 people according to the National Autonomous University. That was about the same as in 2011, but more than double the Central American average—itsself among the highest in the world (see chart). In 2012 Honduran men in their 20s faced a 1-in-300 chance of being murdered, or 1-in-150 in the most dangerous towns.

Drug mafias, under pressure in Mexico, have set up in Honduras. In January the authorities discovered a cache of weapons, including a gold-plated AK-47 believed to belong to Mexico's "Zetas" mob. Honduras's wild coast and empty jungle provide landing points for some 40% of cocaine destined for the United States. Traffickers pay their hired help in drugs rather than cash, creating a local market and the mayhem that goes with it. Some of the violence comes from gangs known as maras, which migrants form in jails in the United States and remain members of in Central America after they are deported.

Then there are seemingly targeted assassinations. At least 25 journalists, including eight last year, have been killed since the coup. Some members of the opposition have accused the government of snuffing out dissent. But Robert Marin, a reporter on El Heraldo, a newspaper, who has himself received threats, points out that journalists of all political stripes (and none) have been victims. So, too, have gay-rights campaigners—at least eight were killed last year—and lawyers, 15 of whom were murdered. However, these are by no means the people most at risk: some 60 taxi drivers were killed in 2012, in many cases following extortion attempts, and about 70 police. Last month the teenage son of a former police chief was shot dead.

The underlying problem is that few of the killings are investigated, let alone punished. Even as Honduras's murder rate has doubled, the number of police has fallen, from about 14,000 in 2009 to 13,000 now. Many supplement their $400 monthly wages by charging a "war tax" on citizens. A vetting programme begun in August tested 1,231 officers by the end of the year, firing 280 of them. A further 450 left voluntarily. The remainder are due to be vetted this year, and a thousand more recruited annually until the force reaches 20,000. Training time has been doubled, to 12 months.

It will take a decade fully to restore faith in the police, which had "fallen into total discredit", admits Héctor Mejía, the force's spokesman. The army patrols with the police in Tegucigalpa, the capital, and in the northern city of San Pedro Sula, as part of an "emergency" measure renewed three times since it was introduced in 2011.

Many Hondurans are taking protective measures into their own hands. In Villa Cecilia, a small working-class suburb of mechanics, seamstresses and policemen in Tegucigalpa, residents pay 700 lempiras ($15) per household per month to employ four security guards with shotguns. Next will come CCTV, an entry-phone system and a bigger perimeter wall. "If you want to sleep well, you have to pay", shrugs Giovanni Aguilera, a taxi driver whose home is protected by two metal doors, barbed wire, and a pair of large dogs. The city government has encouraged such barrios seguros, permitting residents to block off their streets. The poorest districts, built on steep hillsides lacking formal

Killing fields

Murders per 100,000 people

Year	Honduras	El Salvador	Guatemala	United States	Latin America average
1999	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2001	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2003	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2005	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2007	~45	~45	~35	~10	~35
2009	~55	~45	~35	~10	~35
2011	~85	~45	~35	~10	~35
2012	~95	~45	~35	~10	~35

Source: UNODC national statistics

• • •

Contents 12:11 22%

The Americas The Economist March 9th 2013

roads, remain unsealed.

Despite the violence, Honduras's economy grew by a respectable 3.3% last year, and clocked up record legal exports. A free-trade deal with Central America and the United States has helped to attract maquila factories and call-centres, and to protect investments from political turbulence. Remittances keep consumption going, as shown by the glitzy shopping malls mushrooming in the capital.

But the resilient economy hides weak public finances. The government's unpaid bills to its workers and contractors amount to 4% of GDP. Many teachers have stopped turning up at school. A standby agreement with the IMF has not been renewed. As a result, the World Bank has halted its budget support, though it plans to step up other project funding. The government has turned to borrowing in the expensive local market. It is considering an international bond issue. But last month Moody's, a credit-rating agency, changed its outlook on Honduras's already weak credit rating to negative. The government has told several loss-making state-owned companies to come up with reform plans by the end of March. But any savings may be squandered in the run-up to the election.

Honduras's politics has become as dysfunctional as its government and security forces. In December Congress voted to sack four Supreme Court justices who had repeatedly found new laws to be unconstitutional. Their replacements have been more co-operative, approving several controversial laws. One gives the legislature the power to sack senior public officials. "The rule of law in this country has broken down", says Ramón Custodio, head of the official but independent Human Rights Commission. He is among the officials who can now be fired by Congress. He also worries about a media bill that promises new taxes and regulations, which newspapers have described as censorship.

The head of Congress, Juan Orlando Hernández, is the candidate of the ruling National Party in the presidential race. Polls show him neck and neck with Xiomara Castro, Mr Zelaya's wife. Salvador Nasralla, a television personality, is running for a new Anti-Corruption Party. He has little chance of winning, but he may split the anti-Zelaya vote, to Ms Castro's advantage. If Honduras is to halt its spiral of decline, it desperately needs strong democratic leadership and an end to its political splits. Neither looks likely. ■

• • •

Interactivity

Give visual cues

Animation

Interactivity

Give visual cues

Animation

Interactivity

Give visual cues

Animation

“Tacit Tutorials”

Interactivity

Give visual cues

Animation

“Tacit Tutorials”

Edit!

Always ask yourself:
“Does this help telling the story?”

Edit!

Always ask yourself:
“Does this help telling the story?”

If the answer is no:

Edit!

Always ask yourself:
“Does this help telling the story?”

If the answer is no:

Storytelling with data

Recent presentation

Check it out!

<http://style.org/tapestry/>

Recap

Final Project

Start thinking about your project and team

Next Lecture

Effective Visualizations (More tips!)

Next Lab

Storytelling